14 in which the metals were deposited, classified by mint, 15 denomination, weight, assay mark, or other indicator, as 16 applicable. The standards must conform to applicable national and 17 international standards of weights and measures.

18 (d) The comptroller by rule may, if the comptroller 19 determines that to do so is in the public interest, restrict the 24 holder.

25 (b) The depository shall adjust the depository account
26 balances of the depository accounts to reflect a transfer 27 transaction between depository account holders on presentment of

1 the check, draft, or other instruction by reducing the payor's
2 depository account balance and increasing the depository account
3 balance of the payee accordingly.

4 (c) If a depository account holder transfers to a payee who 5 is not a depository account holder any portion of the balance of the 6 holder's depository account, the depository shall allow the payee
7 to establish a depository account by presentment of the payor's

18 with respect to the account may be made.

19 (b) The execution of a contract for a depository account
20 described by this section may be made, as prescribed by rules
21 adopted under this chapter, by electronic or digital transmission.

22 (c) The depository or a depository agent shall hold the 23 contract for a depository account in the records pertaining to the 24 account.

25 (d) A contract for a depository account executed by a
26 depositor and the depository is considered a contract in writing 27 for all purposes, and may be evidenced by one or more agreements, deposit receipts, signature cards, amendment notices, or other documentation as provided by law.

(e) The depository and the depository account holder may amend a contract for a depository account by agreement, or the depository may amend the deposit contract by mailing a written notice of the amendment to the account holder, separately or as an enclosure with or part of the account holder's statement of account or passbook. In the case of amendment by notice from the depository, the notice must include the text and effective date of the amendment. The effective date may not be earlier than the 30th day after the date the notice is mailed, unless otherwise provided by rules adopted under this chapter.

Sec. 2116.009. CAUSE OF ACTION FOR DENIAL OF DEPOSIT LIABILITY. (a) A cause of action for denial of deposit liability on a depository account contract without a maturity date does not accrue until the depository has denied liability and given notice of the denial to the depository account holder.

(b) The depository's act of furnishing an account statement or passbook, whether in physical, digital, or electronic form, constitutes a denial of liability and the giving of such notice as to any amount not shown on the statement or passbook.

(c) The depository's sovereign immunity from suit is waived for an action brought by a depositor for the denial of deposit liability.

(d) The depository's liability for a denial of deposit liability is limited to the amount on deposit for which liability was denied. A depositor may not recover consequential damages, exemplary damages, pre- or post-judgment interest, costs, or attorney's fees.

(e) A suit authorized by this section must be brought in a district court of Travis County.

(f) A suit authorized by this section must be brought before the expiration of one year after the date the cause of action accrues or the suit is barred.

Sec. 2116.010. FEES; SERVICE CHARGES; PENALTIES. The comptroller by rule may establish fees, service charges, and penalties to be charged a depository account holder for a service or activity regarding a depository account, including a fee for an overdraft, an insufficient fund check or draft, or a stop payment order.

Sec. 2116.011. DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT OWNERSHIP BY OWNER OF RECORD. Unless the depository acknowledges in writing a pledge of a depository account, the depository may treat the holder of record of the account as the owner of the account for all purposes and without regard to a notice to the contrary.

Sec. 2116.012. TRANSFER OF DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT. (a) A depository account may be transferred on the books of the depository only on presentation to the depository of:

(1) evidence of transfer satisfactory to the depository; and

(2) an application for the transfer submitted by the person to whom the depository account is to be transferred.

(b) A person to whom a depository account is to be transferred must accept the transferred account subject to the terms of the deposit contract, this chapter, and rules adopted under this chapter.

Sec. 2116.013. DEPOSITORY ACCOUNTS NOT INTEREST-BEARING.

The depository may not pay on a depository account:

(1) interest;

(2) an amount in the nature of interest; or

(3) a fee or other payment for the use or forbearance of use of money, bullion, specie, or precious metals deposited to a depository account.

Sec. 2116.014. LIEN ON DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT. (a) Without the need of any further agreement or pledge, the depository has a lien on each depository account owned by a depository account holder to secure any fees, charges, or other obligations owed or that may become owed to the depository in connection with any of the depository account holder's depository accounts as provided by the terms of the depository account holder's applicable depository account contract.

(b) On default in the payment or in the satisfaction of a depository account holder's obligation, the depository, without notice to or consent of the depository account holder, may transfer on the depository's books all or part of the balance of a depository account holder's depository account to the extent necessary to pay or satisfy the obligation, as determined by reference to the exchange rates applicable at the time of the transfer.

(c) The depository by written instrument may waive wholly or partly the depository's lien on a depository account.

(d) Subject to a lien created as provided by this section, the depository shall recognize the lawful pledge to a third party by a depository account holder of the depository account holder's rights, interests, and entitlements in and to a depository account as an intangible asset. On the satisfaction of other requirements of law in respect of the perfection and enforcement of a pledge of that type, the depository shall take all steps reasonably necessary and appropriate to effectuate on the depository's books any transfer of a depository account or of all or part of a depository account balance to the account of the secured party on the successful enforcement of the pledge.

Sec. 2116.015. DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT AS LEGAL INVESTMENT. (a) The following persons may invest the person's money in a depository account by purchasing precious metals and depositing the precious metals with the depository or a depository agent:

(2) a political subdivision of this state or an instrumentality of this state;

(3) a business or nonprofit corporation;

(4) a charitable or educational corporation or association; or

(5) a financial institution, including a bank, savings and loan association, or credit union.

1 commissioner of insurance.

2 (c) An investment by a school district in a depository
3 account may be made instead of an investment as provided by Section
4 45.102, Education Code, and the depository may be used by a district
5 instead of a depository bank for the purposes of Subchapter G,
6 Chapter 45, Education Code.

7 Sec. 2116.016. APPLICABILITY OF ESTATES CODE. The 8 applicable provisions of Chapters 111, 112, and 113, Estates Code,
9 govern a depository account.

10 Sec. 2116.017. PLEDGE OF JOINTLY HELD DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT.
11 (a) Unless a term of the depository account provides otherwise, a 12 person on whose signature precious metals may be withdrawn from a 13 depository account that is jointly held in the names of two or more 14 persons may, by a signed pledge, pledge and transfer to the 15 depository or to a third party all or part of the account.

16 (b) A pledge made as described by Subsection (a) does not 17 sever or terminate the joint and survivorship ownership of the 18 account, to the extent applicable to the account before the pledge.

19 Sec. 2116.018. DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT HELD BY FIDUCIARY. (a)
20 The depository or a depository agent may accept a depository
21 account in the name of a fiduciary, including an administrator,
22 executor, custodian, guardian, or trustee, for a named beneficiary.

23 (b) A fiduciary may open, add to, or withdraw precious
24 metals from an account described by Subsection (a).

25 (c) Except as otherwise provided by law, a payment or 26 delivery to a fiduciary or an acquittance signed by the fiduciary to 27 whom a payment or delivery is made is a discharge of the depository

1 for the payment or delivery.

2 (d) After a person who holds a depository account in a
3 fiduciary capacity dies, the depository may pay or deliver to the
4 beneficiary of the account the quantity of precious metals
5 represented by the balance in the depository account, plus other
6 rights relating to the depository account, wholly or partly, if the 7 depository has no written notice or order of the probate court of:

8 (1) a revocation or termination of the fiduciary
9 relationship; or

10 (2) any other disposition of the beneficial estate.

11 (e) The depository has no further liability for a payment
12 made or right delivered under Subsection (d).

13 Sec. 2116.019. DEPOSITORY ACCOUNT HELD IN TRUST;
14 UNDISCLOSED TRUST INSTRUMENT. (a) If the depository opens a 15 depository account for a person claiming to be the trustee for 16 another person and the depository has no other notice of the 17 existence or terms of the trust other than a written claim against 18 the account:

19 (1) the person claiming to be the trustee, on the 20 person's signature, may withdraw precious metals from the account; 21 and

22 (2) if the person claiming to be the trustee dies, the 23 depository may pay or deliver the quantity of precious metals
24 represented by the balance in the account to the person for whom the 25 account was opened.

26 (b) The depository has no further liability for a payment or 27 delivery made as provided by Subsection (a).

1 Sec. 2116.020. POWER OF ATTORNEY; REVOCATION ON DEATH OR 2 INCOMPETENCY. (a) The depository shall recognize the authority of 3 an attorney-in-fact authorized in writing by a depository account
4 holder to manage or withdraw precious metals from the depository
5 account holder's depository account until the depository receives
6 written or actual notice of the revocation of that authority.

7 (b) For purposes of this section, written notice of the 8 death or adjudication of incompetency of a depository account
9 holder is considered to be written notice of revocation of the 10 authority of the account holder's attorney-in-fact.

11 Sec. 2116.021. TRANSACTIONS AND RELATIONSHIPS. The 12 depository shall enter into transactions and relationships with 13 bullion banks, depositories, dealers, central banks, sovereign
14 wealth funds, financial institutions, international
15 nongovernmental organizations, and other persons, located inside
16 or outside of this state or inside or outside of the United States, 17 as the comptroller determines to be prudent and suitable to 18 facilitate the operations of the depository and to further the 19 purposes of this chapter.

20 Sec. 2116.022. CERTAIN ACTIONS PROHIBITED. The depository
21 may not take any of the following actions, and any attempt by the 22 depository to take any of the following actions is void ab initio
23 and of no force or effect:

24 (1) entering into a precious metals leasing,
25 sale-leaseback, forward transaction, swap transaction, future
26 transaction, index transaction, or option on or other derivative of 27 any of those, whether in the nature of a cap transaction, floor

transaction, collar transaction, repurchase transaction, reverse repurchase transaction, buy-and-sell-back transaction, securities lending transaction, or other financial instrument or interest intended to or having the effect of hedging or leveraging the depository's holdings of precious metals, including any option with respect to any of these transactions, or any combination of these transactions, except that the limitation provided by this subdivision does not apply to a transaction entered into to limit the depository's exposure to post-signature price risks associated with executory agreements to purchase or sell precious metals in the ordinary course of depository operations and does not apply to policies of insurance purchased to insure against ordinary casualty risks such as theft, damage or destruction, loss during shipment, or similar risks;

(2) crediting the depository account balances of a depository account holder, or disposing of any precious metals, if to do so would cause the aggregate depository account balances with respect to any precious metal represented by all depository accounts to exceed the aggregate quantities of such precious metal held by or for the benefit of the depository and the depository's depository agents;

(3) entering into or maintaining a deposit, trust, or similar relationship for the custody of precious metals by a third party outside this state, directly or indirectly, for the account or benefit of the depository if the comptroller by rule establishes that:

(A) the custody or intermediary arrangements in question do not meet the comptroller's standards of safety, security, and liquidity; or

(B) except in those cases where such relationship may be incidental to the performance of or preparation for purchase and sale transactions with counterparties located outside of this state, suitable alternate arrangements for physical custody of the precious metals inside this state have been established and are available;

(4) extending credit to a person, including credit secured by a depository account or other assets, except an extension of credit incidental to the performance of the functions and responsibilities otherwise provided by this chapter; or

(5) engaging in a business or activity that, if conducted by a private person, would be subject to regulation in this state as a banking or savings and loan function.

Sec. 2116.023. CONFISCATIONS, REQUISITIONS, SEIZURES, AND OTHER ACTIONS VOID. (a) A purported confiscation, requisition, seizure, or other attempt to control the ownership, disposition, or proceeds of a withdrawal, transfer, liquidation, or settlement of a depository account, including the precious metals represented by the balance of a depository account, if effected by a governmental or quasi-governmental authority other than an authority of this state or by a financial institution or other person acting on behalf of or pursuant to a directive or authorization issued by a governmental or quasi-governmental authority other than an authority of this state, in the course of a generalized declaration of illegality or emergency relating to the ownership, possession,

1 or disposition of one or more precious metals, contracts, or other
2 rights to the precious metals or contracts or derivatives of the 3 ownership, possession, disposition, contracts, or other rights, is 4 void ab initio and of no force or effect.

5 (b) The depository in the case of receiving notice of a 6 purported confiscation, requisition, seizure, or other attempt to 7 control the ownership, disposition, or proceeds of a withdrawal,
8 transfer, liquidation, or settlement of a depository account,
9 including the precious metals represented by the balance of a 10 depository account, effected by a governmental or 11 quasi-governmental authority other than an authority of this state 12 or by a financial institution or other person acting on behalf of or 13 pursuant to a directive or authorization issued by a governmental 14 or quasi-governmental authority other than an authority of this 15 state, in the course of a generalized declaration of illegality or 16 emergency relating to the ownership, possession, or disposition of 17 one or more precious metals, contracts, or other rights to the 18 precious metals or contracts or derivatives of the ownership,
19 possession, disposition, contracts, or other rights, may not 20 recognize the governmental or quasi-governmental authority,
21 financial institution, or other person acting as the lawful 22 successor of the registered holder of a depository account in 23 question.

24 (c) On receipt of notice of any transaction described by 25 Subsection (a), with respect to all or any portion of the balance of 26 a depository account, the depository shall suspend withdrawal
27 privileges associated with the balances of the depository account

1 until suitable substitute arrangements may be effected in 2 accordance with rules of the comptroller to enable the registered
3 account holder to take delivery of the precious metals represented
4 by the account balances in question. A voluntary transfer of a 5 depository account balance or of a depository account among 6 depository account holders may continue to take place unaffected by 7 the suspension, and the depository shall recognize to the full
8 extent authorized by this chapter and rules adopted under this 9 chapter.

10 Sec. 2116.024. OFFICIAL EXCHANGE RATES. The comptroller by 11 rule shall establish the references by which the official exchange 12 rate for pricing precious metals transactions in terms of United 13 States dollars or other currency must be established at the time of 14 a depository transaction. The comptroller shall establish 15 procedures and facilities through which the rates are made
16 discoverable at all reasonable times by system participants, both 17 on a real-time basis and retrospectively.

18 Sec. 2116.025. FACILITATION OF ACCOUNTING AND REPORTING OF 19 TAXABLE GAINS. The comptroller by rule shall establish procedures
20 and requirements for the depository and depository agents designed 21 to minimize the burden to system participants of accounting for and 22 reporting taxable gains and losses arising out of depository
23 transactions as denominated in United States dollars or another 24 currency.

25 Sec. 2116.026. ANNUAL REPORT. The comptroller shall submit 26 to the governor and the legislature a report on the status, 27 condition, operations, and prospects for the depository and depository participation each year not later than September 30.

SUBCHAPTER B. DEPOSITORY AGENTS

Sec. 2116.051. USE OF DEPOSITORY AGENTS. The depository shall use private, independently managed firms and institutions licensed as depository agents as intermediaries to conduct retail transactions in bullion and specie on behalf of the depository with current and prospective depository account holders. A depository agent used by the depository under this section must have a minimum five years of depository operational experience or ownership, including three years of direct retail transaction experience with public and private entities or individuals.

Sec. 2116.052. ELECTRONIC INFORMATION SHARING SYSTEMS AND PROCESSES. The comptroller by rule shall require a depository agent to maintain suitable systems and processes for electronic information sharing and communication with the comptroller and the depository to ensure that all transactions effected on behalf of the depository are reported to and integrated into the depository's records not later than 11:59:59 p.m. on the date of each transaction.

Sec. 2116.053. PERIODIC REPORTS. A depository agent shall submit monthly, quarterly, and annual reports of all depository transactions not later than the 15th day of the month following the expiration of the period with respect to which such report is submitted. The report must contain information and be in a form and format as rules of the comptroller require.

4 as an intangible asset. On the satisfaction of other requirements
5 of law in respect of the perfection and enforcement of a pledge of 6 that type, the depository shall take all steps reasonably necessary
7 and appropriate to effectuate on the depository's books any

3 fiduciary capacity dies, the depository may pay or deliver to the
4 beneficiary of the account the quantity of precious metals
5 represented by the balance in the depository account, plus other

8 subdivision does not apply to a transaction entered into to limit 9 the depository's exposure to post-signature price risks associated 10 with executory agreements to purchase or sell precious metals in 11 the ordinary course of depository operations and does not apply to 12 policies of insurance purchased to insure against ordinary casualty

LEGISLATIVE BUDGET BOARD

Austin, Texas

FISCAL NOTE, 84TH LEGISLATIVE REGULAR SESSION

May 27, 2015

TO: Honorable Joe Straus, Speaker of the House, House of Representatives

FROM: Ursula Parks, Director, Legislative Budget Board

IN RE: HB483 by Capriglione (Relating to the establishment and administration of a state bullion depository; authorizing fees.), As Passed 2nd House

Depending upon the number of depository transactions and the amount of fees that could be assessed to depository agents, there could be an indeterminate fiscal impact to the state.

The bill would amend the Government and Finance Codes to establish and administer a state bullion depository. The bill would amend Subtitle C, Title 10, of the Government Code, to add new Chapter 2116 creating the Texas Bullion Depository. The depository would be an agency of the state located in the Office of the Comptroller, directed by an administrator appointed by the Comptroller with the advice and consent of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Senate; would hold certain bullion and specie acquired by the state or a political subdivision of the state; could receive and hold such deposits for private entities; and would use depository agents, as described in the bill, to conduct retail transactions on behalf of the depository with current and prospective depository account holders.

Deposits to the depository and other related assets would not be subject to legislative appropriation. The Comptroller by rule would establish procedures and requirements for the depository and depository agents to facilitate the accounting for and reporting of taxable gains and losses from depository transactions; and could, by rule, establish, fees, service charges and penalties to be charged to a depository holder, with receipts to be deposited to the General Revenue Fund.

The bill would amend Chapter 151 of the Finance Code, regarding the regulation of money services businesses, to provide for the licensing (including a fee), regulation and certification of depository agents.

The bill would take effect immediately upon enactment, assuming that it received the requisite two-thirds majority votes in both houses of the Legislature. Otherwise, it would take effect September 1, 2015.

Based on the specific requirements of the bill, the Comptroller would use private, independently managed firms and institutions licensed as "depository agents" to act as intermediaries to conduct retail transactions on behalf of the depository. The bill's fiscal impacts associated with depository activity, including but not limited to fees, charges, and penalties, cannot be determined. The fee would be set at a level sufficient to cover the costs of implementing the provisions of this bill. At this time, this amount cannot be estimated.

Local Government Impact

The fiscal implications to units of local government cannot be determined at this time.

Based on the specific requirements of the bill, implementation of the provisions would require significant research and analysis. It would entail a substantial undertaking of establishing a precious metal bullion depository that would hold metals in the form of either bullion or specie for institutions and individuals alike in the state. The bill would require an assessment of how to acquire a secure vault.
